TWITTER PLANS

23/9/2012

: Micro blogging website Twitter has announced that it would block the posts, which violate the law of any specific country. The changes are effective from Saturday (January 28) onwards.

Noted cyber expert Pavan Duggal believes that the announcement made by the Twitter syncs with the demands of the Indian government.

Explaining media Cyber Law Expert Pavan Duggal said, There is no doubt that the new changes that Twitter has announced are in sync with the requirement of any country. And specifically in the context of India these changes are in sync with the obligations of the twitter in its capacity as an intermediary.

He said that in India according to the section 21 (W) of information technology act 2000, the micro blogging site Twitter is intermediary and it has abide by the law of the land.

Notably the Indian Telecoms minister Kapil Sibal had asked the various social networking websites that they should start filtering the contents, which do not suite the legal and cultural environment of the country.

Twitter insisted that its commitment to free speech remains firm, and sought to explain the nuances of its policy.
